

Abstract

A method of driving a plasma display panel that is adaptive for improving a picture quality. In the method, 5 first and second sustain pulses having a different width during the sustain period are alternately applied to the first and second row electrodes.